Champion Industries buying Herald Dispatch Newspaper

Champion Industries buying Herald Dispatch Newspaper in Huntington West Virginia. Marshall Reynolds of Huntington West Virginia is the chairman and CEO of Champion Industries Inc. It is my understanding that Champion industries is not owned by Marshall Reynolds, but he does have quite a few shares of its stock. Lets just say that the gentleman is not poor. Marshall Reynolds has put the money on the line as CEO of Champion Industries of Huntington WV to make Huntington a better place. I very much congratulate him for his economic leadership. Marshall Reynolds has invested in Huntington because he loves Huntington and wants to make Huntington a better place for his children and grandchildren, just like the rest of us do. Marshall Reynolds has a stake in many of the local Businesses in the Huntington West Virginia area and he is instrumental in several local business ventures besides Champion Industries. Marshall Reynolds does not need the hassle of running a newspaper. However he and his professional printing associates at Champion Industries are quite well qualified to run the printing plant to print the newspaper cheaper and better than anyone else, and therein lies the potential for a good profit. Marshall Reynolds and Champion Industries know how to make a dollar in Huntington. I very strongly suggest that the local Huntington naysayers get out of his way and let Marshall Reynolds do what he doe best. The newspaper business is a natural investment for a professional printer like Marshall Reynolds. Local control of a newspaper is a ticket to economic growth and positive change when well done. If Marshall Reynolds is half as successful in the Newspaper business as he has been in other business ventures, Huntington West Virgna will have a great newspaper as a result of increased local influence over the editorial priorities of the newspaper. I very much look forward to see what Marshall Reynolds and the other local business professionals who are involved with champion Industries intend to do with the Herald Dispatch Newspaper. Change is in the works. Stephanie Heck
